gether with miscellaneous crop reports from other sections of the country. In Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Nebraska nearly all the reports agree that this will be a year of plenty. Wheat has mostly been cut and stacked. The quantity is far above the average, and the quantity is far above the average, and the quantity was never excelled. There will be at least one-quarter more wheat exported from these States than any previous year. From lowa reports are not as encouraging. In the main the yield is fully up to the average, but some sections have suffered from the ravages of grasshoppers, army worms, and chinch bogs. While the weather has figured conspicuously in retarding the growth and development of grain, the State will average as large acrop as heretofore, some counties falling below and others exceeding the yield of former. and others exceeding the yield of former years. Kansas is happy, especially the northern portion. The departure of the grashopers has permitted nature to recompense in part last year's losses. All reports agree that a more bountiful harrest has never been gathered in that State. In Illinous but little Spring wheat is grown. As far as reports go, there is no reason for complaint. The crop will be fully up to the average of former years. Taking all in all, the prospect is encouraging. Not only will there be wheat enough for home demand, but the West can, without fail, supply the European market. The reports state that the yields generally are large and the quality line, the berry being in excellent condition.

Hanna, who lives six and one-half miles west of Madison, Indiana, and near the little town of Hanover, during the night time of the 17th inst, one small mule and a pair of fine yellow mares, and after proceeding about one mile from Mr. Hanna's place they found in the lane a horse belonging to a poor man of that neighborhood, which they also took along.
